

War is Dangerous – A Dystopian Story Extract

We were in a helicopter on our way to... well we weren't really told what we were going to be doing or where we were going.

They said if they told us we wouldn't have gone. As we flew closer the clouds didn't look like clouds; they looked like a portal to... somewhere else, these 'things' were purple and blue and moving, not far though.

My friends were getting just as suspicious as I was. They asked "Is this why we're here?"

Sergeant 64 didn't answer.

Then the alarm of the plane started going off. Some of the soldiers started shouting "JUMP OUT!"

I wasn't the type of soldier to listen.

Then the helicopter started shaking a lot, Sergeant 64 shouted "HOLD ON!"

I did what he commanded and held on for dear life.

I will never forget what happened next. The plane crashed but not in the ocean as I was expecting... We crashed onto an island, not any normal island though, it was terrifying and scary but the next thing that happened shocked me...
